DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. Claims 1-6 and 12-13 are objected to because of the following informalities:
change "Ashitaba" to "ashitaba". Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bank et al. (WO 98/58656) in view of [Crawford et al. (J. Agric. Food Chem. 1990. 38. 2169-2175) or Medicinal Plants in the South Pacific (WHO Regional Publications. 1998. Western Pacific Series No. 19. p. 149) or Torres et al. (J. Agric. Food Chem. 1987. 35. 921-925) or Chang et al. (J. Chromatogr. B. 2000. 760. 227-235)].
4. Bank et al. teach a citral flavor deterioration inhibitor (or stabilizing agent) (abstract) in the form of a water-soluble plant extract (p. 5 lines 22-24). They also teach a storage stable food composition with a citrus flavor that includes this extract (claim 16).

Art Unit: 1709

5. Bank et al. add the plant extract inhibitor to their composition at a concentration ranging from about 10 ppm to 500 ppm (claim 15).
6. Bank et al. teach that their extract inhibits the formation of the citral degradation product p-methylacetophenone (claim 24).
7. Bank et al. state that the plant extract comprises a caffeic acid derivative (claim 3).
8. Bank et al. are silent as to the use of an extract from ashitaba, avocado, common plantain, oriental senna, hawthorn, semi-fermented tea leaves, or fermented tea leaves. They also do not speak specifically to the use of their composition in fragrances and cosmetics.
9. Crawford et al. teach the presence of caffeic acid in oriental senna (Cassia obtusifolia). Traces of chlorogenic acid (a caffeic acid derivative) were also detected (p. 2172).
10. WHO teaches the presence of caffeic acid and chlorogenic acid in common plantain (Plantago major L.) (p. 149).
11. Torres et al. teach the presence of caffeic acid in avocado (Persea americana) (p. 924).
12. Chang et al. speak to the presence of chlorogenic acid in the fruits of hawthorn (Crataegus pinnatifida) (p. 228).
13. Ashitaba, semi-fermented tea leaves and fermented tea leaves are also known in the art to contain high levels of polyphenols.

Art Unit: 1709

14. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have substituted an extract from a plant containing polyphenols, caffeic acid, or a caffeic acid derivative as taught by Crawford et al., WHO, Torres et al., or Chang et al. in the compositions or method taught by Bank et al. in order to inhibit the degradation of the citrus flavor. This would result in a product with greater citrus-flavor stability.

15. Regarding the use of the composition in fragrances and cosmetics, it would have been within the ability of one with ordinary skill in the art to modify an inhibitor of citral-deterioration smell in food-products for use in fragrances and cosmetics to inhibit the formation of an off-smell in these products as well.
